

Sino-US cooperation to benefit the people of all countries-people from many countries positively comment on the video meeting between the heads of China and the U.S.

Source: Xinhua| 2021-11-16

Xinhua News Agency, Beijing, November 16th Chinese President Xi Jinping held a video meeting with US President Biden on the morning of November 16. People from many countries believe that this meeting is of great significance. It fully reflects the strategic leading role of the head of state diplomacy in Sino-US relations and further strengthens the international community's positive expectations for the future development of Sino-US relations. Meeting each other halfway between China and the United States will bring bilateral relations back to the right track of healthy and stable development, which will benefit the peoples of China and the United States and the people of all countries in the world.

Ruan Zongze, executive vice president of the China Institute of International Studies, said that President Xi Jinping proceeded from the fundamental interests of the two peoples and the common interests of the peaceful development of mankind, and pointed out that China and the United States should strengthen communication and cooperation, not only doing their own domestic affairs, but also taking responsibility. Taking up due international responsibilities and jointly advancing the noble cause of peace and development of mankind has embodied the big picture and great responsibility. The head of state diplomacy is crucial to the leading role of Sino-US relations. This video meeting will help to enhance understanding, form consensus, manage differences, and lead the positive development of Sino-US relations.

Robert Lawrence Kuhn, chairman of the Kuhn Foundation of the United States, said that the video meeting between the US and China heads of state is a commendable step in leading the development of bilateral relations in the right direction. The meeting pointed out the direction for the development of relations between the two countries, and it was also very important and timely for the entire world. Currently, issues such as the new crown epidemic, climate change, and economic slowdown need to be resolved urgently. Without the cooperation of the two major powers of the United States and China, it would be difficult for the world to effectively respond to these common challenges.